Boolean Search

Within all of the search fields, the Boolean Operators AND (also + or &), OR, and NOT (also -) allow you to perform searches that specify logical relationships between terms. By default, an AND relationship between each of the terms you enter is established except for the Author field (see Author Searching below).

Author Searching

To search for multiple authors, separate each author name with either AND or OR. Using AND will search for content that has been co-authored by the authors. Using OR will search for content that has been authored by either of the authors.

The spectral energy probability approach improves the sensitivity-specificity tradeoff of existing MS/MS search tools, addresses the notoriously difficult problem of "one-hit-wonders" in mass spectrometry, and often eliminates the need for decoy database searches. ... There are 7887 spectra in the target database with spectral probabilities below SpectralProbability_{decoy} (MS-GF identifies these spectra with virtually zero FDR). ... While the approaches (-5-7, 16) are very valuable, neither of them rigorously solves the Spectral Matching Problem for individual spectra; instead, they compute the error rates based on approximate fitting the empirical distributions to a standard distribution that may not carefully reflect the specifics of an individual spectrum. ...

RSS (Really Simple Syndication)

What is RSS?
RSS (Really Simple Syndication) feeds are free content feeds from websites. Through RSS you can receive article headlines and links back to full text articles from all ACS Journals.

Where can I get an RSS reader?
There are many RSS readers (also called RSS aggregators) available on the Windows, Macintosh OSX, Unix, and Linux operating systems, many of which are free to use.

Most modern Web browsers have built-in support for subscribing to and viewing RSS
